NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following can be defined as THE unique attribute used as a unique identifier within a given table to identify a tuple?

- A. secondary key
- B. candidate key
- C. primary key
- D. foreign key

Answer: C

Explanation:

The following answers were NOT correct:

Candidate Key: A candidate key is a combination of attributes that can be uniquely used to identify a database record without any extraneous data. Each table may have one or more candidate keys. One of these candidate keys is selected as the table primary key.

Foreign Key: A foreign key is a field in a relational table that matches the primary key column of another table. The foreign key can be used to cross-reference tables.

Secondary key: The term secondary key is a key that is used strictly for data-retrieval purposes. A secondary key is sometimes defined as a "data item value that identifies a set of records." It is important to note that a secondary key does not need to have unique values in a table; in this respect, secondary keys differ from primary keys (and candidate keys and superkeys).

Feedback from Jerry: A candidate key is one of several alternative columns in a table that may be chosen as a primary key. The PRIMARY KEY IS the unique identifier. The foundation of a relational database is the establishment and reliance on a unique primary key, not candidate keys. Primary key is a more correct answer to this question than candidate key.
