NEW QUESTION: 1

To provide evidence of GDPR compliance, a company performs an internal audit. As a result, it finds a data base, password-protected, listing all the social network followers of the client.

Regarding the domain of the controller-processor relationships, how is this situation considered?

A. Compliant with the storage limitation principle, so long as the internal auditor permanently deletes the data base.

- B. Compliant with the security principle, because the data base is password-protected.
- C. Non-compliant, because the storage of the data exceeds the tasks contractually authorized by the controller.
- D. Not applicable, because the data base is password protected, and therefore is not at risk of identifying any data subject.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 2

A call center application consists of a three-tier application using Auto Scaling groups to automatically scale resources as needed. Users report that every morning at 9:00 AM the system becomes very slow for about 15 minutes. A Solution Architect determines that a large percentage of the call center staff starts work at 9:00 AM, so Auto Scaling does not have enough time to scale out to meet demand.

How can the Architect fix the problem?

- A. Change the Auto Scaling group's scale out event to scale based on network utilization.
- B. Permanently keep a steady state of instances that is needed at 9:00 AM to guarantee available resources, but leverage Spot Instances.
- C. Use Reserved Instances to ensure the system has reserved the right amount of capacity for the scale-up events.
- D. Create an Auto Scaling scheduled action to scale out the necessary resources at 8:30 AM every morning.

Answer: A
